

Letter of Introduction

Let's face it. Given the recent economic collapse in the USA, its citizens have changed many of the habits that caused the calamity in the first place.

For the first time in decades, Americans begin to save for the proverbial "rainy day." Savings are up to about 4%. Of course, the ideal rate of savings should be around 10 percent. At least we are making strides in the right direction.

Purchases of mega homes and giant vehicles that get eight miles to the gallon are almost a thing of the past. Shopping malls are empty and all the congestive traffic that once surrounded the mall has evaporated. Restaurants, at their peak, were being constructed on a mass production level and filled at stadium speeds. Today, chains have closed doors and a home cooked meal takes us back to the good old days when Mommy filled our tummies with love and affection.

Even morality has shifted. As we clenched our Wall Street purses, the divorce rate declined with our portfolios. I guess the old saying, "it's cheaper to keep her," has more meaning to it than just being slick lyrics. The expense of carrying two homes has forced many couples to reconsider the "I hate your guts," emotion. That feeling has changed to, "Maybe we can work it out?"

As Americans get back to the old school way of living, reading, home DVD's, board and card games will become more popular. After all, it's hard to spend your life savings from the comfort of your own home, unless you're an Internet junkie.

A new market unlocks for all that have ingenious eyes to catch the trend. Americans will look for many economic and wholesome items to enrich their lives, and I intend to be there with my ear to the ground.

Please take a gander at my works. I am sure to assist the American family in its effort to get back on track. Enjoy!

GREAT BOOK, COMEDY / DRAMA
LIFE'S VITAL ADOLESCENT DECISIONS

(NEW YORK, NY, (July 2004) AuthorHouse publishing announced today the publication of a seasoned book, entitled MEMOIRS OF A BROKEN FAMILY by Irv Childress.

Over the journey of life we are faced with decisions—good—bad and hideous. Children, especially in their late teens, need to learn what first-class decisions are early in life. When children learn to make quality decisions for their lives, life takes on a whole new meaning.

Kevin Carr begins his life's voyage in 1969. Before Kevin becomes aware of how the three types of decisions of life function, he is knee deep in the midst of the consequences. What are the three types of decisions? The three decisions are; the ones we make for ourselves, the decisions others make on our behalf, and indecision.

Somehow, Kevin is able to navigate through many of life's pitfalls and uncover a degree of victory. The readers of this book will walk away with the ability to dream, the will to find the purpose of their life and guts to go and pursue purpose.

MEMOIRS OF A BROKEN FAMILY is an excellent learning tool for the youth. The book provides excellent examples of first-rate and terrible decisions made by Kevin Carr. The workbook, taken from the book, is an excellent tool to provide material for a six to eight week reading group. Youth group leaders; this is the tool that you've been waiting for.

Most of the time, I try not to think about my childhood. But there are times when I think back on my childhood and I wonder. We didn't live in Africa or some other poor country. We lived right here in the United States of America. It seemed strange to me that so much difficulty could exist in a family in one of the richest nations in the world.

I don't agree with stealing either, but sometimes you have to do what you have to do. We borrowed all the money that we could have from Mrs. Juliet. Our backs were against the wall. We did what we had to do.

I needed ways to deal with the devastating happenings in my environment. "Someday I'll have my own family," I thought. "I'll have the opportunity to be a husband and father. When I get the chance, I will do it right. I'm going to own my own business someday. My children will never live the life that I lived. Someday I'll marry, and my wife will love me just for being me."

What Makes For A Good Decision?

I remember an incident in my younger years. I worked security for AT&T in NJ. AT&T was building a new location next to the location I worked at. The security company gave us a white Ford Bronco to monitor the construction site. Carlos was the driver and one night he got bored so he decided to go 4X4-ing next door. Well, he misjudged how high the cement stumps were for the lampposts. The mounting bolts were already set in place. Carlos drove over the curb and the vehicle fell on the lamppost studs. "Mayday, mayday," he called on the radio. We came out to help him move the Bronco. It wouldn't budge. Plus, I could smell the gasoline leaking on the ground. Carlos looked at me and asked, "Do you think I'll get fired for this?" I looked at Carlos and replied, "Fired? You'll be lucky if they don't press charges."

Carlos made a poor decision on that day and he paid for it with his job.

Poor decisions seem to come a dime a dozen these days. However the inverse of a bad decision is just as possible as the bad decision. Sometimes it requires some diligence.

The best decisions a person can make is:

1. Discover one's destiny.
2. Do what it takes to make it a reality.

It's easier to rob a bank than to build on purpose and destiny. However, if one decides to discover purpose and pursue it, all other decisions will become simplistic. All other decisions will coincide with the first two decisions; discover one's destiny and pursue it.

Don't procrastinate. Make a decision to discover your destiny and pursue the reality of that destiny.

NEW BOOK, SELF-HELP FOR YOUNG DATING WOMEN

(NEW YORK, NY, February 2008) AuthorHouse publishing announced today the publication of a new book, entitled I WISH MY DAD TOLD ME THAT; *A Progressive Dating Guide For Young Women by Irv Childress.

So you've been dating for a while. Is this Mr. Right or Mr. Right For Now? Does he have what it takes to be a husband? Do you really know what his plans are for you? If so, you should be able to easily answer the following questions.

What is the secret code that men live by? What are the not so secret codes that men live by? How do you know when a man is ready to marry? How do the rules of the Stock Market apply to dating? Can and will a man contain himself sexually until marriage? How can fear affect your dating judgment? Does weight play a factor in dating? What does real love look like?

Roughly sixty percent of the American households do not have a male father figure. Our young ladies are left to navigate the minefield of dating all alone. Sadly, once most of the young ladies figure out the male's method of operation, the prime marrying years are well behind them.

As a father of two daughters, I've been baffled with today's dating nuances. Many of our young ladies are misinformed in the area of dating. I see young women waste their prime marrying years with a man that has no intentions of ever marrying them or anyone else for that matter. I see young women being sidetracked into her boyfriend's agenda as the children keep coming and no real wedding date is ever seriously considered. I am overly perplexed with young ladies who are willing to be a mistress only. As I began to think of the things I'd like to share with my daughters when it is time for them to date, I penned this work to help my girls avoid many of the pitfalls of dating.

I WISH MY DAD TOLD ME THAT A Progressive Dating Guide For Young Women is an excellent reading choice for any young lady of dating age. It is a great way to develop discussions about dating in a youth group setting. I WISH MY DAD TOLD ME THAT; *A Progressive Dating Guide for Young Women is currently available for sale at www.irvchildress.com, AuthorHouse.com, Barnes & Noble and Amazon.com.

“There are two types of single heterosexual men—the men that are ready to marry and the men that are not. No amount of sex will ever change a man’s mind.

Belief: If I turn the bed upside down and keep him suspended in the air with my freaky ways, he’ll see that he can’t live without me. I’ll freak my way down the matrimonial aisle.

Truth: As he’s enjoying your freaky ways, he will simultaneously cast judgment on you. His primary thought will be, “I wonder how many other guys she has done this with?” Your chances of getting down the aisle with this guy are slim to none. He’s going to drink from your fountain until he’s full or until you demand more than he’s willing to give. Then he’s moving on because the element of trust has been stretched.

Progressive Dating: Cutting Through The Dating Red Tape!

You'll never hear a young lady say, "I want to date and date until I'm a single old maid. But, it happens frequently—possibly to someone you know closely. At the end of the dating period, the grand prize should be a spouse right? Then, why do many women, particularly African American women, go beyond the age of 35 without ever have found a spouse? Is it because of the lack of available men? Is it because of the lack of opportunities? The answer is "no" to the previous questions. One, of the countless reasons, is many women do not know the signals that men give when they are not ready for commitment.

Sure there are many excuses that can be given after the age of 35 for not being married. I worked on my career. I'm not ready for marriage. I don't need a man. There are no more good men available—all men are the same—bums.

Perhaps you've spent way too much time with someone that has no inkling of marrying you. The signs are always there. You just have to pay attention or understand the language of a man.

Here's a brief list to help you spot a man that is ready for marriage. If your man has more than two of these traits, he's not a candidate for marriage.

1. He buys clothes with his rent money. Irresponsible is his middle name.
2. He treats his mother disrespectfully and/or dishonors his sister(s). Any man that dishonors the womb from which he came will have no problem with dishonoring you—womb man.
3. He's available only at his convenience, particularly during the booty call hours. It is what it is.

Remember this tip: Men are decision makers. Decisions are always being made—with or without your knowledge. You must always create compelling ways to have your man make well informed decisions about you.

I Wish My Dad Told Me That! A Progressive Dating Guide For Young Women

Being a woman over 30, I thought I knew it all when it came to dating and relationships..... Until I read “I Wish My Dad Told Me That”. In this road map to dating, relationships and life I learned so much about the process but more importantly about me. This book makes you take a close look at yourself and where you missed it and applauds the few times you may have gotten it right. Being written by a great man like Irv makes the book more insightful because it gives the insight of a man's heart into the mind of a woman. Many times it's hard to “read” a man and understand the unsaid. But with this great book I was able to actually see life from a man's point of view. To understand the insight and thoughts of what a man thinks or wants from a woman makes me a better woman. Not to comply but to justify. After reading this book I felt like “Daddy’s Little Girl” again.

"Memoirs of a Broken Family" relates an important story that is all too familiar to many people. Spanning the late 60's through the 90's, the book examines how one person's life and mind can be irreversibly affected by the consequences of divorce.
